Kavanaugh also sustained gundy bruises, which, he says, the two men inflicted with their revolvers after the money was paid, the intends applying this morning for larrant charging them with assault to till. Kavanaugh was removed to his home in an ambulance after being treated at the City Dispensary by Doctor Voerster, who pronounced his wounds not serious.

Kavanaugh claims that he went into the lunch stand to get something to cat and the men accused him of owing them an old account. He remembered of having traded with them before, but did not call to mind that he was in debt to them, and they each drew a revolver and held him up for the amount they claimed due them. After being paid, the switchman says, they beat him on the head with their weapons.

Enormous Outlay for Furnishing the Spectacle Unique in Annals of the World.

CREDIT DUE LORD CURZON. EARNS $2,000 ON SINGLE TRIP.

General Regret That He Does Not Combine With Administrative Powers the Ability to Become Popular.

HERALD AND THE ST. LOUIS REPUBLIC. London, Jan. B .- (Copyright, 1903.)-Now that the magnificance of the Durbar has cone, people are counting the cost. Induding the bill the Indian Governmen will have to pay, the expeditures incurred by the Indian Princes and chiefs and the English Governors and Lieutenant Governors, it is safe to say that as least $10,-000,000 has been spent in furnishing a spec tacle unique in the annals of the world. The Indian Government's bill is likely to exceed $3,750,000. The cost to Lord Curzon personally has been very great, for a large number of guests were entertained by him entirely at his own expense. of the native Princes and chiefs vary greatly, from the $50,000 said to have beed spent by the Nizam of Hyderabad to the $50,000 with which the minor chiefs were able to make but an indifferent display.

When it is remembered that the number of these Princes and chiefs reaches nearly 100, the total expenditure can easily be calculated.

The Governors of Madras and Bombay and Lieutenant Governors of the various Provinces, found it possible, by the exercise of careful European supervision, to keep down the complete cost of their camps to about $75,000.

Of the various events, the proclamation Durbar was undoubtedly the most impressive, and the review of the retinues of the native chiefs was the most picturesque, while the natives appreciated the fireworks most of all.

The ball in the Dewaniam was the most gorgeous scene as the investiture was the most stately, but the wearlsome state entry into Delhi was very remarkable as an example of organization.

It is wonderful that no accidents occurred during the long procession of cicphants, carriages, horse and foot through the streets.

Lord Curzon is to be warmly congratulated on the result of his hard work, but the general comment is that it is unfortunate that his power stops short of securing popularity. His manner is excessively arrogant.

Visitors accustomed to King Edward's court declare that, according to the dispatches, there is more bowing and scraping in a week at Delhi than in a lifetime in London. ORATION OF SECRETARY HAY.

Delivered at Memorial Meeting to Former President McKinley.

Secretary of State John Hay is one of America's recognized diplomats and man of letters. For six years he was one of the editors of the New York Tribune and was Ambassador to Great Britain under President McKinley's first term, and after serving a year was recalled to assume the office of Secretary of State in the Cabinet.

One of his most eloquent orations was delivered on February 27, 192, at the joint memorial session of the United States Senate and the House of Representatives, when he delivered a eulogy on the lamented President McKinley. He began this address by reference to the problems of anarchy. He referred to President McKinley's career in the Civil War, as a lawyer, orator, statesman, diplomat, economist, harmonizer, patriot, hero and President of the United States.

MISTAKE COST GIRL'S LIFE. She Replenished the Lamp From Can Filled With Gasoline.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

Quincy, Ill., Jan. II.—The alleged mistake of a grocery in giving a customer gasoline instead of kerosene proved fatal this morning, when Ella Fitzgerald, aged 16, died as the result of burns received while filling a lighted lamp Friday night. It is claimed that she asked for kerosene, but, by a misunderstanding, the grocer filled the can with gasoline. It was dark when the girl reached home and her mother had lighted a lamp in which the oil was low. She requested the girl to fill it. Ella thought it would not be necessary to extinguish the flame and began pouring the oil in the reservoir.

In a moment there was an explosion, which threw the burning oil all over the girl.

In her endeavors to rescue her child, the mother was severely burned. This morn-ing the girl died in great agony. The Coroner will hold an inquest to-

WOMAN BURNED TO DEATH. Wife of Wealthy New Yorker Perished in Burning Home.

New York, Jan. II.—Mrs. Florine Henry, the wife of Philip S. Henry, a wealthy coffee merchant, and daughter of the late miner-banker, Lord Lewisohn, was burned to death to-day in a fire that almost entirely destroyed the residence of the family at No. 54 East Flity-sixth street.

Alberta Erickson, a servant, jumped from the fourth-story window and received injuries from which she died soon afterwards. The fire, which originated from an unknown cause, had gained considerable headway before it was discovered, for when the first alarm was sent out the house was in flames from celiar to roof.

Mrs. Henry's two Infant children were saved by their nurse, who ran with them to the street immediately after the discovery of the fire. Mr. Henry, who was slightly burned, was rescued by a policeman, who entered the house before the arrival of the firemen. It was supposed that his wife had already made her escape.

After the fire had been extinguished Mrs. Henry's charred body was found in her bedroom on the second floor. Apparently she had succumbed to the smoke while attempting to reach a window.

Mrs. Henry, who was 5 years old, was married six years ago in London, where husband was engaged in business.

Alaskan Mail Carrier Travels Eighteen Hundred Miles With His Precious Packages.

Sometimes Makes Two Trips a Year-Spends Hard-Earned Money in the Gayeties at Nome and Scattle.

The Republic Bureau, 16th St. and Pennsylvania Ave. Washington, Jan. 11.—"Through snow and ice, 1.80 miles, is the trip of an Alaskan mail carrier." W. V. Sollivan, son of former Senator Sullivan of Mississippi, made this statement this evening, Mr. Sullivan had just returned from a two years' cruise in Alaskan waters on board the United States revenue

"This trip," he continued, "is from Cook's inlet to Nome, and by the route traveled is "The last boat leaves Nome about No-ember 5, and it carries down a mighty pre-lous cargo-gold dust, discouraged miners, scaping wives, the soubrettes who come up in the spring, marry the successful pros-pectors and then desert when the winter shuts up the town from the rest of the world, and the last mail sack Uncle Sam brings through the Aleutian Islands for six menths.

"Then, while you people down here in the big cities are squabbling for 1 cent local postage, the men up in Nome are getting ready to pay the heaviest postal rate in the world. By the 25th of December they've got the Christmas hunger for home news and New Year's Day they'd give a side of bacon for a sight of familiar handwriting on an envelope. Bacon is still about 50 cents a silee in the cating-houses.

"But just about the first of January the midwinter Alaskan mail starts north from Seattle, it is carried up by the owner and operator of the enterprise, who runs a private mail service not revenized or promoted by the United States Government. He collects letters from Seattle to Cook's Inlet, making the trip on any vessel that is scheduled to stop at Sitka, Douglas Island, Juneau and all the points of any importance along the coast.

"Only setters are carried and these must scheduled to stop at Sitka, Douglas Island, Juneau and all the points of any importance along the coast.

"Only letters are carried and these must be written on onion-skin paper, for bulk is the chief consideration, and, besides, the rate is so much a pennyweight.

"When Cook's Inlet is reached the letters are packed in tin boxes made to conform to the carrier's body and fit into the lining of his coat. The carrier's costume, from the fur cap to the Mozinski boots, is exactive like that of the Eskimos, and the principal items in his outfit are matches, gun and ammunition.

"From Cook's Inlet to Nome the trail runs 1.890 miles and touches no man's hut or digout. The carrier can make forty miles a day on snow shoes. He has studied the country so thoroughly that he knows when he shoots a bird and cooks if for dinner Tuesday, over a fire of scrubby irush, where, fifty miles ahead, he can find more game and fuel for the cooking of Wednesday's supper. After supper he crawls into a fur sleeping bag, dropping off into a cozy snow bank for a snooze through the darkest hours of the long night.

"The greatest obstacles are the torrente that flow too rapidly to freeze. The crossings are made at the narrowest places and the carrier strips, makes a bundle of his clothes, throws it across or carries it on his head, and, wading and swimming, reaches the opposite shore and scrambles into his furs.

"In his tin pockets he carries a fortune, for the thinnest letter taken on the route costs the sender 19. Usually but one trip is made each winter, but last season he broke the record by making two rounds, doing this by using dogs and a sled part way. His winter's work netted him over $2.000, to be blown in on the gayeties of Nome and Seattle."

A. K. STILES MAKES A CLAIM. Complications in Regard to the Title of Old Fort Massac.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL

Metropolis, RI., Jan. 11.—In connection with the movement now being agitated before the Illinois Legislature by the Illinois Daughters of the American Revolution to have old Fort Massac's site here transformed into a national park, some interesting complications in regard to the title of the land are probable.

It is generally supposed that the historic old spot is the property of the helis of the late William H. Green of Cairo, III., but A. K. Stiles of Ottawa, III., now comes in with a claim for the property, or a part of it. He is president of the Streator Gas Light Company, and is a prominent citizen of LaSaile County.

Some twelve years ago Mr. Stiles purchased a tract of seventy acres of land in Kentucky, opposite the old fort, and received a deed from the State of Kentucky. In the deed this land is located in the county of McCracken Kentucky. It is described by metes and bounds, beginning at a stone in the center of the site of old Fort Massac. The description clearly includes a part of the historic ground.

There is further interest from the fact that the old fort may be found to be in the State of Kentucky instead of Illinois, or at least a part of it. This is due to the fact that the Ohlo River is a part of Kentucky, the Illinois line being the low-water mark on the north side of the stream.

William Martin, City Engineer of Metropolis and County Surveyor of the county, adds more interest by the statement that the property is vet really a part of the original United States land, no one ever having obtained a clear legal title to it. He claims to have looked into the matter thoroughly back to the original Government survey.

Rivefhead, L. L. Jan. II.—Louis A. Disbrow, charged with being responsible for the drowning of Dimples Lawrence and Charence T. Foster in Tiana Bay, near Good Ground, last June, will be tried here at a special term of the Supreme Court next week. District Attorney Livingston Smith, with more than fifty witnesses, is on the ground, conddent that the evidence he has obtained will result in a conviction. Roland B. Miles for Disbrow will call nearly as many witnesses, he says and declares more confidently than ever that he will not only win acquittal for his client, but will show that he was innocent of any act that led to the death of his companions. That interest in the case has abatel very little since last summer is shown by the fact that the hotels in Riverhead are already filled. The village has been engaged by those who are to be here either with witnesses or merely to listen to the story that will be told during the trial.

MACHINE REGISTERS THOUGHTS OF A GIRL

Erratic Course of Her Mind Is Re corded in Chart Form.

CASE PUZZLES SCIENTISTS.

Interesting Effort Being Made to Find the Lost Chord in the Erratic Memory of the Patient.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

'lost chord" in the vagrant memory of riously called herself, 20 years old, probing into a mentality that retains only faint dashes of things that have been, the resources of new science are brought to bear and hypnotism seeks yet vainly, but with a glimmer of hope, to find the girl who has lost herself by awakening a subconscious idea still obscured by a veil that baffles the staff of the Psycho-Pathic Hospital connected with the New York Infirmary in East Fifteenth street.

By the use of a marvelous machine the erratic course of the girl's mind is record-ed in chart form. This machine, called the ed in chart form. This machine, cannot the pneumograph, produces an odd series of wave lines, some running almost regularly in a generally longitudinal course, while others suddenly shoot up or down from the course of the course of the cashion.

wave lines, some running almost regularly in a generally longitudinal course, while others suddenly shoot up or down from the line of regularity in surprising fashion. To the lay mind these convey absolutely no information. It is, nevertheless, parity through these erratic lines that Doctor Borls Sidi, chief of staff or the hospital, expects to trace the girl's return to normal condition.

The odd jumps of the sensitive point of an electrically controlled needle record the efforts of Madeline Church to find herself-for the girl has been lost, mentally, since she was found, wandering in West Fifteenth street, two weeks ago.

It was an odd scene that was presented shortly after Madeline was led into the operating-room of the hospital to-night, About her torso was placed an electric band terminating in a daphragm, such as is used in a telephone and from which ran a wire to the instrument on the table, which it entered through another diaphragm, which as is used in a telephone and from which ran a wire to the instrument on the table, which it entered through another diaphragm, which actuated a slender marking point that recorded in white ink upon smoked paper, the tracings of her efforts to regain the lost memory.

Dr. Harrison Deady, seated in a chair near her left shoulder, spoke soothingly to the patient, and then began the monotonous ticking of a metronome close by. Presently he demanded that she raise her left arm and keep it up stiffly. Up went the arm and it was found impossible to bend it. The arm remained so for a space of time which, to the average person, would be impossible and was lowered only at the command of Dr. Deady.

With the girl in a condition of hypnosis questioning began with the purpose of arousing the subconscious mind of the sufferer from amnesia.

"Where did you live, tell me?" he began. "Scranton," was the prompt answer.

"But before that?" was quickly asked. "Gh.-Pittsburg-yes, I went to school there until I was 14."

"To went to another school-embroidery."

"How do were you then?"

"Sixteen—I worked in a department store four years.

Here the girl's recollection failed and, questioned about her father and mother, she said both were dead, adding:
"I lived with my sunt in Scranton."

And this is the point where Madeline's memory stops. Nothing could she recall of her former life. Her parents' given names are hidden by the impenetrable veil that shuts off her memory. The name of her aunt, the street where she lived, everything that might restore her identity, is gone.

But her case is not hopeless, the scientists declare. A little gained at each inquiry and pieced together with what can be ascertained by close observation and inquiry while in her normal state may reveal Madwhile in her hopeself, and her friends.

DILATORY TACTICS MAY DEFEAT CUBAN TREATY.

Opponents of the Convention Do Not Care to Openly Fight It, but Hope to Prevent a Vote Being Taken.

Washington, Jan. 11.-There is danger that the Cuban reciprocity treaty will fail of ratification, not because it cannot command the necessary two-thirds vote, but because the opposition will take advantage of the rules of the Senate and prevent a vote from rules of the Senate and prevent a vote from being reached.

The contention over the statehood bill, the antitrust question and other matters that will be pressed before the Senate will be utilized by the opponents of reciprocity in furtherance of their plan. The Louisiana and Florida Senators are against the treaty for local reasons and are directing an effort and Florida Senators are against the treaty for local reasons and are directing an effort to obtain the support of Democratic Senators from the South and West.

Several of the Republican Senators, who resisted concessions to Cuba at the last session on account of the beet sugar industry are not openly antagonizing the treaty, but it is feared some of them are indifferent, while others, perhaps, are aiding the opposition secretly.

The representatives of the beet sugar manufacturers having decided officially to withdraw opposition to the treaty, Senators from beet-growing States cannot continue in open opposition on the ground that ratification would injure that industry.

The danger to the treaty lies in the fact that its oppoments may be successful in their plan to defeat a vote by a system of dilatory proceedings, utilizing every contentious matter that comes before the Senate to consume time. If it is not ratified by January 31, further negotiations will be necessary between the two Governments for an extension of time, and, as the session will terminate March 4, the opposition will endeavor to prevent action before that date, in the hope that the treaty cannot be renewed in time to get a vote before the expiration of this Congress.

Broadway and Locust. LIVE STOCK CONVENTION PLANS

Seven Thousand Persons Expected

At Kansas City Meeting.

Kansas City, Mo. Jan. II.—All arrangements have been perfected for the National Live Stock Association, which, with its adjuncts, the National Wool Growers' Association and the National Association of Railroad Live Stock Agents, will meet in convention in this city this week.

The three conventions will attract seven thousand persons directly connected with them, besides a host of those interested in the live stock business.

A fund of $20,000 has been raised for the entertainment of the visitors, and every minute of their time here will be crowded with incident.

The Live Stock Convention will begin its sessions Tuesday morning in the Century Theater, and will hold sessions there also Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. The wool growers will meet Tuesday at the Live Stock Exchange, and the railroad men will meet at the Coates House Wednesday and Thursday.

The wool growers are not all members of the big organization, will participate in its convention.

The entertainment provided are for all three organizations, as for friends of members and delegates and also for the visiting newspaper sien. Concluding the week there will be an excursion to New Orleans on a special train open alike to ali.

The convention proper will be called to order by John W. Springer, president of the association, who will deliver his annual contents. at Kansas City Meeting.

dress. This will be followed by the annual report of the secretary, Charles F. Martin, and the annual report of the Executive Committee. The programme for the convention contains some exceptionally able addresses, and is full of general interest. Beside there will be some lively debates by notable men on subjects of general concera. The visitors ball in convention hall on Wednesday night will be the finest function of that sort that Kansas City has ever attempted. The grand march will be led by President Springer, and the Governors of States, half a dozen of whom will be prejent. The climax of the festivities will be reached Friday night, when there will be huge minstrel show for men in convention hall, and a theatrical party for women at Gertrude Berkeley's playhouse. Plans are practically completed for the annual convention of the National Association of Retail Grocers and General Merchants, which is to be held here Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week. About 300 delegates are expected, and they will be the guests of the Kansas City Retail Merchants' Association.
